

Assessing Development Impacts

Regulatory tools to protect the water in your community

Thursday, March 15, 2012

Time: 7pm - 9:30pm

Lawrence Twp., NJ

Regulatory tools to protect the water in your community

No resource is more fundamental to public health, quality of life and economic vitality than clean water.

Recent changes in the state regulatory landscape have made environmental protection all the more critical at the local level.

Municipalities are in a unique position to safeguard water resources by ensuring compliance with state and local stormwater, wastewater, wetlands and floodplains regulations and permit requirements during site plan review.
